For the prevention and cure o
BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS is recommended
HAHN's ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of persons can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

Hamilton's Elixir,

A sovereign remedy for colds, obstinate coughs, asthmas, sore throats, catarrhs, and approaching consumptions.—To parents who have children afflicted with the HOOPING COUGH, this discovery is of the first magnitude, as it affords immediate relief, checks the progress, and in a short time entirely removes the most cruel disorders to which children are liable. The Elixir is perfectly agreeable, and the dose so small that no difficulty arises in taking it.

Hamilton's Grand Restorative,

Is recommended as an invaluable medicine for the speedy relief and permanent cure of

Nervous Disorders	Violent cramps in the stomach and back
Consumptions	Indigestion
Lowness of spirits	Melancholy
Loss of appetite	Gout in the stomach
Impurity of blood	Pains in the limbs
Hysteric'l affection	Relaxations, etc.
Inward weaknesses and debility

Hamilton's Essence and Extract of Mustard.

A safe and effectual remedy for acute and chronic rheumatism, gout, rheumatic gout, palsy, lumbago, numbness, white swellings, chilblains, sprains, bruises, pain in the face and neck, etc. etc.

Lee's Ointment for the Itch.

Warranted an infallible remedy at one application, may be used with perfect safety by pregnant women, or on infants a week old, not containing a particle of mercury or any dangerous ingredient whatever, and not accompanied with that tormenting smart which attends the application of other remedies.

Hahn's true & genuine German Corn Plaister.

An infallible remedy for corns, speedily removing them root and branch, without giving any pain.

The Genuine Persian Lotion,

So celebrated among the fashionable throughout Europe, is an invaluable cosmetic, perfectly innocent and safe, free from corrosive and repellent minerals, the basis of other lotions, and of unparalleled efficacy in removing blemishes of the face and skin, freckles, pimples, inflamatory redness, scurfs, tetters, ringworms, sunburns, prickly heat, &c.

Hahn's genuine Eye Water,

A sovereign remedy for all diseases of the eyes, whether the effect of nature weakness or of accident.

Tooth Ache Drops.

The only remedy yet discovered which gives immediate and lasting relief in the most severe instances.

Lee's Infallible Ague and Fever Drops

For the cure of agues, remittent and intermittent fevers.

The horse is a grey, about 15 hands high, 9 or 10 years old, has a switch tail, a speck on the right eye, and moves swiftly. The gig has a green body, carriage and wheels black, the lining of blue cloth, red stuff top, linings, plated double—outside joints

FROM THE FRANKLIN GAZETTE.

PINDAR'S PIPE NOT OUT.

'Tis odd how many people will pretend
To what above their grade is:
Few gentlemen in Sunday suite, descend
To tell you what their trade is, [pend,
And women, with fine and pretty airs, de-
Not always are true ladies.

People of title and of station,
May be excused for affectation,
For elevated o'er the rest,
Often the very best
Of beads, you know,
Will turn and giddy grow;

But when no better than their neighbors,
Some folks, with unremitting labours,
Aspire above them,
And lose no opportunity to shave them,
Upon the back ground of contempt,
Such people should not be exempt,
(Whene'er we know it)
From the sharp satire of the poet.

One morn, Lucinda, early, it is true
To visit, [new,
Called on an acquaintance, somewhat
Knock'd—"This is the house of Mr. Grew,
Is it?
Is Miss Maria in? I want to see her!"

The servant girl (a country wench) had Scarcely a week the city in, [been
And fear
Lest the lady were in a hurry,
Caused her, in her flurry,
Although the parlour door was near,
Instead of asking her in it
To wait a minute
Until her mistress should appear,
To lead the way still further back.
(The stranger following her track)
To where she knew
Miss Grew
Was ironing some clothes!

What astonishment—amaze—
Spoke Lucinda's doubting gaze!
The mighty wonder,
To find Maria Grew was thus employ'd,
Just like a sudden clap of thunder,
Lucinda's utterance seemed to have destroy'd.

"La!" said the young, affected miss,
"Who'd tho't to thus find you!
Such drudgery and work as this,
Our servants always do."

Maria, with a blush, apologized—
Begg'd she would be excused—
Own'd see had been surprized
At what she was unused.

"Don't quit for me," Lucinda cried,
"Don't quit at all for me!
Beside,
Such things I wish to learn about,
For in necessity,
They cannot well be done without."

I've read how when a ship was wreck'd
Upon an island of Pelew,
The natives flock'd there to inspect,
A thing so odd and new;
And how, comic fellows! [bellow's;
They were diverted with the blacksmith's
And how they laughed together in delight,
When by sign shewn
How they might
Forever turn the grindstone!

As if as ignorant as those,
Lucinda finger'd with the clothes,
Following Maria with curious eyes,
And many a simper of surprise.

But sometimes folly will itself out-fool,
And turn the wight himself to ridicule.

To shew how little ladies knew,
Such things concerning,
"La! what is that," cried she, "Miss Grew,
You just have put the fire on?"
But hap'ning, silly elf,
To touch the article itself,
She found, by feel, 'twas hot to burning—
'Confound,' said she, 'the ugly Iron!'

STORY TELLING.

Persons who are very fond of telling stories, become adepts in the art of invention and exageration; in which species of falsehood they are too often encouraged and applauded. Thus the principles of veracity daily grow weaker; habits of falsehood are acquired; and the story teller who first only lies to amuse, at length repeats the transgression whenever it may serve his turn.

ALEXANDRIA:
SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 1.

FOR THE GAZETTE.

Critical Essay on the Fourth Canto of Childe Harold's Pilgrimage.
(No. 3.)

The extracts which have been made were taken in their natural order, and the selection of them was not intended to intimate an opinion that they surpass their associates. In truth, the latter part of the canto is more abundant in beauties, than that which has been considered. But the extent which this article has unwittingly reached, forbids the insertion of any additional stanzas. Discontinuing therefore, the perseverance with which Harold has been hitherto accompanied in his journey, we shall sketch a brief and rapid outline of his subsequent progress.

From Tuscany he seems to have passed to the popedom, where his attention was first engaged by Perugia, the Thrasimenus of ancient Italy. After portraying it as the scene of Roman disaster, he describes its present tranquillity. Of the reflections on Cliturnus, the Campanian river, that contained in stanza 68 is the best. The celebrated artificial cascade at Velino, in the kingdom of Naples, occasions to the poet his next, and perhaps most graphical picture. He who reads the following portion of it, will more readily excuse the breach than the forming of our resolve, just hinted, to forbear farther quotation.

LXII.

"Horribly beautiful! but on the verge,
From side to side, beneath the glittering morn,
An Iris sits, amidst the infernal surge,
Like hope upon a death-bed, and unworn
Its steady eyes, while around is torn
By the distracted waters, bears serene
Its brilliant hues with all their beams unshorn
Resembling, 'mid the torture of the scene,
Love watching madness with unalterable mien."

In the Neapolitan territory lord Byron seems to have been detained but for a short time. Who is satisfied that he did not stay long enough to describe its beautiful bay?

And now the pilgrim reached the "Eternal City!" His eye is now met by the mistress of the world—the queen of art—the sanctuary of religion: disrobed of her mantle of power and environed by solitude—yet

"Perchance even dearer in her hour of wo,
Than when she was a boast, a marvel and a show."

To respond faithfully to the emotions engendered by the idea of this spectacle in the breast of a classical moralist is impossible. But, to apply to the present subject the words of one who never used words in vain, "it is sufficient for lord Byron to have done better than others what no man has done well."

In Eustace's tour it is stated, that during the French occupation of Rome in '98 and '99, Voltaire's Brutus was acted in the Coliseum. To promote the amusement, the republican Vandals determined to remove thither, from its abode in the Palazzo Spada, the statue of Pompey. Its gigantic size made necessary the amputation of an arm, and on restoring it to the Palazzo the surgeons of liberty sawed off the other.—Both were afterward replaced. In the lines of the pilgrimage which celebrate him, no allusion is made to this sacrilege against the hero of republican Rome, the conqueror of kings and of himself.

The parallel between Cæsar and Napoleon, commencing in stanza 89, would strike most readers as conveying the decision of

"An ardent judge, who zealous in his trust,
With warmth gives sentence, yet is always just."

Caution may, however, suspect in it something of partiality to the Roman.

After a flattering advertence to our own country, Harold meditates over the Capo di Bove, where lie the ashes of Cecilia Metella, the wife of Crassus. Of the reflections on this tomb, (supposed by a fanciful writer to echo the sounds of lamentation which fall near it) those in Stanza 102 are the most affecting.

At Rome terminated the pilgrim's travels in Italy. The remainder of the canto describes the interesting objects in that city and its vicinage, varied by frequent moral speculations. No notice can now be afforded to these moving alternations of description and sentiment, other than to designate the chief of them; namely the stanzas on Trajan, the greatest and most virtuous of the emperors—on Rienhi, who in a degenerate age revived the memory of Gracchus—on Egeria, the celestial mistress of Numa—on love—on time—on the gladiatorial shows—on a moon-light view of Rome—on the pantheon—on the Roman daughter—on St. Peter's—on the Apollo Belvidere—on solitude—on the ocean—and on the writer's individual misfortunes.

The English reader will also find an exquisite panegyric on the princess Charlotte, furnished by a bard from whom ambition or self-interest never elicit praise.

The arrangement, just detailed, of the beauties of this canto, will be found to exclude but a small part of it.

The misnomer in the title of this essay is now, we fear, quite obvious to the reader. For its scarcity in analytical criticism, the apology offered is the unexpected prolixity to which the illustrative portion has been drawn out. In fact, the article in its original draught, ranged widely into a view of lord Byron's poetical peculiarities and the sources of his high reputation. For the reason given, this view is omitted for the present, and our remarks will conclude with a stricture or two on the versification.

The metre in which the Pilgrimage is composed, is confessedly more laborious than any other in the language, and subjects to a severer test the rhythmical ability of the attempter. Milton's objection to the couplet was the tyranny which it exercised over thought, by requiring the admittance or exclusion of words, and not unfrequently of a line, for purposes of mere sound.—This inconvenience is observable in even Pope, the closest thinker, as well as the most skilful versifier in the whole poetical calendar. It necessitated him to use an artifice which he practised too often to elude detection always; namely the placing of the superfluous line first in the couplet.—Every school boy knows the secret history of the distich,

"A wit's a feather and a chief's a rod:
An honest man's the noblest work of God."

The expectation was, that the intruder would escape censure, by the audacity with which it invited notice. If such be the embarrasment of a measure, where the thought is followed through only two lines, what must be the perplexity of that, where it is alternately remitted and resumed thro' a painful succession of four verses, and those not in immediate sequence? Indeed, the prosperity of the English poets who have essayed to cultivate this stanza, has not been such as might stimulate new adventurers. Spenser, whose name it bears, is now completely a shelf classic. The success of Beattie has not sustained his eulogy on its capabilities: for the harmonious and highly poetical passages which have been admired in the Minstrel, are attended by a retinue of cumbrous and sleepy companions. Campbell, a more exact distinguisher of the true Castalian stream, has found the fluency of his conceptions impeded by the magnificent but heavy vestment with which Gertrude enveloped them. Every reader of the Pennsylvanian tale prefers that part of it where the Indian warrior deserts the stately rhymth of his poet, for strains more suitable to his indignant anguish.

It is remarkable that Thompson has given to this species of verse, despite of its trammels, unusual harmony; though he failed to attain even a common degree of that quality in the Seasons, where no obstacles were presented.

Scott's attempt in "the Vision of Don Roderick," is allowed on all hands to be an abortion.

It was reserved for lord Byron to heal many of the distempers which had before seemed radical in the constitution of this metre. In some parts of the first canto of Harold, and in the greater part of the second, he gave to it a sonorous dignity, which entitles it to the praise yielded by Pope to the versification of his great master;

"The full majestic march and energy divine."

From uniformity, the "besetting sin" of this stanza, no poetical regeneration could redeem it: but though it was impossible that Lord Byron could render it various or lively, he has made it the gorgeous vehicle of thoughts, of which, tho' all are clothed in resembling garbs, none could be spared. The attempt in Canto 3d, to diversify the pauses and shorten the quantity was, on the whole, injudicious, as it demanded an irksome vigilance from the reciter. In the subject of our present examination, the enterprise is prosecuted more happily every where than in the Alexandrines. For instance, what ear is delighted by the ensuing lines?

"And still the eloquent air breathes—burns with Cicero."

"In ruin, even as he had seen the desolate sight."

"A mirror and a bath for beauty's youngest daughters."

"Thou wert a beautiful thought, and softly bodied forth."

Connected with the objections which have been made to the metre of the Pilgrimage, may be stated its unaptness for expressing a continuous train of ideas. Not like some rival rhythms, furnishing a channel through which tho't may flow unopposed, this stanza is a strait abounding in obstructions that perseveringly barras its course.

Perhaps the abrupt, disjointed character of Lord Byron's reflections is ascribable not only to metrical enthralment, but also to the change which his mind seems to have lately undergone. Its vivacity has obviously lessened, and its combinations have abated much of their rapidity and grace of their former progress. One thought seems less successively to allure a circle of beautiful and congenial sisters, but rather to be obtruded on by unsympathising strangers. The conceptions of the poet, instead of arranging themselves in contiguous strata, appear like the columns of the basaltes, distinct and unsocial. But, like that far-famed marble, their direction looks upwards from the earth.

It is evident that the private unhappiness of the noble author has imparted a mournful temper to his mind, which urges it to assemble images of ruin and grief. The origin of this unhappiness, curiosity has often sought to explore. Let benevolence hope that it may speedily terminate, and that sorrow may no longer twine round the energies of one whom nature formed to illustrate his country and his kind.

The beautiful ship "Cleopatra's Barge," built by Mr. Crowninshield, and in which he made the tour of Europe, will be sold at Salem to the highest bidder. This pleasure boat, when abroad, excited the admiration of all who saw her and was pronounced to far surpass in point of elegance any vessel that ever floated. [N. York paper.

VERY IMPORTANT NEWS.

By the arrival yesterday of the schooner Endora, Captain Hugh E. Vincent, in 6 days from Havana, we are put in possession of the very interesting intelligence, that the Floridas have been ceded by the Spanish Government to the United States.—This pleasing and highly important information was communicated to capt. Vincent the evening before he sailed, by capt. Bonnell, of the schooner Mary-Ann, of this port, who had just arrived at Havana, in 44 days from Cadiz. This news captain B. requested capt V. to report on his arrival in Charleston. It was also stated, that our Minister was on the eve of sailing, when the cession took place. We have not as yet, been put in possession of the facts and circumstances relating to the very important measure—but from a personal acquaintance for several years, with both the above named gentleman, and from a conviction of their intelligence and veracity, we are inclined to place the greatest confidence in the report. A letter, we understand, has been received from Captain Bonnell, by a gentleman of respectability in town, corroborative of the fact.

Captain Vincent informs us, that the report of his vessel having lately been under seizure at Havana, is without foundation.

The following is an extract of a letter to John C. Duke, Esq. proprietor of the "Times," and probably refers to a vessel which had arrived at Havana from Cadiz, in a much longer passage than the Mary-Ann. The arrivals there will be found noted in our marine department.

"Havana, July 16.

"A packet arrived from Cadiz a few days since, but brought us nothing interesting, at least nothing has transpired farther than instructions to the Captain General of this place, to aid and asssist "Morillo" all in his power; and whatever he may wish, or ask for, to grant without loss of time, and acquiesce with him in every respect.

"American produce somewhat brisker. Philadelphia Flour, 22 dollars—New-Orleans, 17 a 18—Rice 9½ a 10—Boards and Scantling, 30."

RELICS OF ANCIENT SPLENDOR.

The New England Galaxy and Masonic Magazine, a paper published at Boston, and always rich in miscellaneous reading, is publishing some interesting original extracts from the Journal of a gentleman up the Mediterranean and Archipelago. From a late number of this paper, we copy from the Journal the following description of St. John's church, at Malta. This church was founded in the 11th century, and is said to be one of the most magnificent in the world. [Albany Gaz.

"Upon entering it, it appeared to me like one mass of gold; for the interior, which as well as the exterior, is of stone, was entirely gilt. The building seemed to be about 200 feet long, on each side of which are several arches, each of which may be considered as a church, as they all have altars. At the head of the church are two marble figures about 12 feet in height, one representing our Saviour, the other St. John baptizing him. The floors of the church, and the floors of the arches are composed of marble slabs, each slab containing the arms of a knight, with an appropriate inscription in Latin. These marbles are white, and the arms and inscriptions of various colored marble set into them. Each knight is interred under a separate marble. The chief altar has a sublime appearance. It is composed of the most beautiful lava, and highly ornamented. The keeper of the church led us to a vault in which three of the principal knights are interred. One of whom was La Valette,* the founder of this city, whose name it bears.

"The full length figure of each is cut in marble, and set upon stone coffins. The riches of the church are immense. The doors, gates, candlesticks, (some of which are 12 feet in height) are of massy silver. When Bonaparte took possession of the Island, he robbed the church of two millions of dollars in silver and gold, which he put on board of two frigates. One of them was taken by the British. The inhabitants prevented further pillage, by painting their silver works a wood color. The remains of Bonaparte's palace, which was about half finished when the British took possession of the Island, are still to be seen."

*1565 Solyman sent 30,000 men against the town of Malta, which was defended by 700 knights and 300 soldiers, under the command of the Grand Master, John de Valette, at the age of 71 years. When some of his friends saw that their brave commander was wounded, they entreated him to retire—but he replied, "at seventy-one can I finish my life more gloriously than by dying with my brethren!" After sustaining a severe siege, they were relieved by a force sent from Sicily, and the Turks were compelled to retire. Hence this town obtained the name of "Citta Vittoriosa;" which it still retains.

LOSS OF THE BRIG MARY.

In our last we briefly noticed the loss of this vessel on the coast of Africa. The following minute narrative of that lamented occurrence, has since been handed us for publication.

Friday, May 29.—We steered south by compass, wind N. and N. N. E. and moderate breezes. At 9 o'clock A. M. the vessel struck bottom in St. Ann's bay, on the coast of Africa, in latitude of about 22, 30, N. and 16 or 17 west longitude from Greenwich.—Immediately called all hands upon deck, and tried to wear ship, but found all our endeavors fruitless, owing to a heavy surf beating on shore. At 3 o'clock A. M. the rudder unshipped. At sun rise discovered the natives upon the high lands to the north, and about two or three miles distant, coming down towards the vessel. At this time captain Howland ordered a boat to be dispatched to the shore, under the command of the mate, with clothing and stores, with directions to land the same.—Before the boat was discharged upon the shore, the natives, then being 15 or twenty in number, arrived, and in a very hostile manner, with their spears, drove the boat's crew into the surf, and proceeded immediately to plundering the property which had been deposited on the shore. The chief of the tribe, being a man of about 30 years of age, and about five feet nine inches in height, having long and straight hair, black and piercing eyes, and a voice the most terrific, was the foremost and the most active in expelling the crew from the shore. He appeared very desirous of seizing upon the crew of the boat, but finding his people entirely employed in seizing upon the plunder, he abandoned the crew to participate with his subjects in the booty. The boat's crew availing themselves of this opportunity, ran to their boat, and hastened to the vessel with all possible expedition. The natives finding themselves in the peaceable possession of their plunder, and disappointed of seizing upon the boat's crew, retreated with their plunder behind some sand hills, about 30 or 40 rods distant from the shore. In this situation the men concealed themselves, and sent their women forward to the shore, for the obvious purpose of enticing the crew again to come on shore. In this exigency Captain Howland ordered a boat's crew to accompany him in one of his boats to the shore, taking with him some presents of provisions and clothing, calculating therewith to purchase a peace of the savages, for the purpose of enabling him without molestation to build a shallop upon the shore to return home. He had no sooner landed and delivered his presents than the women, not satisfied with his voluntary gratuities, renewed in a more exemplary manner the scene of plunder before practised by the men, by robbing them of their hats, jackets, handkerchiefs, &c. and in all probability would have stripped them of every garment they had on, but for their resistance. Capt. Howland having thus ascertained the disposition of the natives, returned without further molestation to the vessel. All hands were now employed in preparing the boats for embarkation; two of which had already been launched into the surf. At 9 A. M. two camels, each led by a native, came from the highlands, apparently laden with bushes, but concealing no doubt the muskets with which the crew were afterwards attacked. The camels stopped behind the sand hills, where the savages were concealed, and were immediately unladen, and shortly afterwards the camels were led back again to the highlands. About 10 A. M. we cut away the mainmast. The noise produced by its fall so much intimidated the natives, that they instantly in great confusion fled from their retreat. Having ascertained the cause, they returned to their place of concealment.—The women now adopted every stratagem to entice the crew of the vessel to come again on shore, such as falling upon their knees, extending their arms towards the heavens, kissing their hands, and the like. This farce they kept up until about 2 o'clock P. M.—At this time, being about low water, we lowered our last boat into the water.—Instantly upon this, the savages rushed from their concealment, and dividing themselves into three sections, one body headed by their chief, plunged into the surf, so as to attack the vessel at midships; another at the bows, and the third at the stern. Having got within about ten yards distance from the vessel, they then threw off their coverings, which consisted of skins, and drew out their muskets, which had before remained concealed, and immediately commenced firing upon the vessel.

Three muskets only were discharged, and those were from the chief. The muskets of the others, though repeatedly snapped missed fire. At the first discharge, Job Miller, who was upon the quarter of the vessel, and assisting the mate in getting his boat round the brig into the surf, received a ball in his thigh, which broke the same. The second shot struck Jas. Edwards, who was under the bows in the second mate's boat and pierced his body, and the last did no execution. The crew, at this time were all engaged in getting off from the vessel. The mate's boat in getting round the vessel was cast by the violence of the surf upon the main yard of the vessel, and stove in three places by the same. The mate then cast off from the vessel with his boat, she being about half full of water, and stretched out some distance from the vessel into the surf, having stopped the holes in the bottom with the jackets and handkerchiefs of the crew. The captain having previously got off into the surf with two men in his boat, and seeing the perilous condition of the second mate whose boat was under the vessel's bows, returned to the vessel, and steered his boat to the after part of the same. The crew of the second mate's boat immediately left the same, and got on board the brig again. The surf then carried the captain's boat upon the spars of the mainmast, and bilged her in two different places. The captain then shoved off his boat from the vessel, about half full of water, leaving Lemuel Gifford and Job Miller behind in the vessel.

After getting out into the surf, the captain's boat was repaired in the same manner as the mate's. Gifford perceiving that the boats had got off into the surf, and left him behind with Miller, who was wounded, got into the boat, and cut the painter which held it to the vessel, and drifted on shore, where he was immediately surrounded by the natives. The captain and mate, after they had got into the open sea, repaired their boats, by taking up pieces of the ceiling and covering the parts which were broken. The two boats then made sail for the Cape de Verd islands.

On Saturday evening, the 30th May, Edwards died of his wounds, in the captain's boat. On Thursday evening, June 4th, at sun-set, both boats arrived at the Isle of Sal, one of the Cape de Verd Islands, having experienced very rough weather on their passage. From thence, on the 10th of June, we took passage in the ship Shakespeare, of London, Captain Briggs, bound to the Pacific Ocean, and arrived at the Island of Bonavista on the 11th. On the 12th June, the Shakespeare, in co. with the ship Ann, of London, bound to South George's, both sailed on their respective voyages. On the 15th, left Bonavista in the brig General Gates, of Machias, bound for Boston, and arrived at Tarpaulin Cove on the 11th inst. and the next morning came over to New-Bedford.

BUENOS AYRES, April 22, 1818.

An important advantage obtained by the Royalists in Mexico, has induced the Spanish Ambassador resident at Paris, to assert, that by the month of November of the present year, the whole of South America would voluntarily return to its ancient yoke, and it appears by the English papers that his excellency has been congratulated upon this approaching event. When, however, he is made acquainted with the result of the battle of Maypu, he will probably feel the necessity of postponing for a short time the completion of his prediction; and the whole world, including that portion which has been most deceived by the deceptions of the court of Madrid, cannot but be convinced of the impossibility of the Americans receding one iota from their pretensions and oaths.

If in the midst of the confusion created by the total derangement of all those principles which serve as the foundation of States, our enemies have not been able to arrest the career of our glorious struggle, during the continuance of which for a period of 8 years, the public mind has been formed, subordination been restored, and the public authorities have acquired firmness and respectability, how can they now hope to effect their object?

We have no hesitation in confessing, that had Chili fallen, new and very extraordinary efforts would have been required to recover from the shock which it would have given us, but we can assert with that confidence which has heretofore enabled us to bear up against misfortune, that our enemies would have had greater cause to fear us, as we should have risen in proportion to our misfortunes. We have been accustomed to suffer severe disappointments at the very moment when one more successful effort would have crowned all our hopes. Heretofore all our triumphs have been preceded by defeats which have placed our liberty in the most imminent danger. The victory of Maypu is peculiarly distinguished in this point of view—It enabled us to deprive the Spaniards even of hope—it enabled us to prove that we know how to make use of prosperity, and that with common and heroick efforts we have been able to defeat the desperate efforts of our enemies. Such were the sentiments of every Patriot at the moment of receiving the important intelligence of the complete destruction of the army of Peru upon the plains of Maypu. Those who were not witnesses of our transports, cannot form an idea of their excess; those who had the happiness to participate in them will be satisfied that neither the pen nor pencil can do justice to the description. The feelings of the people were wound up to an extreme point of extacy. We are now possessed of a country, cried one to another, as they threw themselves into each others arms, without regard to condition or acquaintance—We now see the end of our sacrifices, and we shall accordingly be able to obtain those enjoyments which we believed reserved for our children, without the melancholy apprehension of losing the reward of so much toil and blood.

He has a wife at Thomas Jennifer's Quarters, near Port Tobacco, and calls himself GERARD BUTLER. He took a black mare with him, which he has since left at his father's, the said Nace's. AN aged, infirm, and widowed mother, is desirous to receive information of of THOMAS BURTON CARTER, an only son, concerning whom she has not heard any thing, on which reliance can be placed, for nearly three years. He removed from this place to the state of Ohio about five years ago. The last certain account she had from him, was from Cadiz in that state. He is about twenty five years of age; by trade a tailor. Vague rumour has recently pronounced him dead. A letter communicating information relative to him, directed to Henry Tutwieler, P. Notice.

To the editor of the Gazette:

SIR—I saw a notice in your paper on the 27th inst. signed Wm. Stoops, requesting Mr. J. Davis to come forward against next court, as a witness relative to an agreement for timber, as he says, between Andrew Bartle and William Stoops; that he will pay Mr. Davis's travelling expences, &c. This Mr. Stoops does with a view to bias the minds of the public—as he well knows that he never made any agreement for the timber that I have brought suit against him for. The timber that he alludes to is that he so feloniously and clandestinely bore off without any leave from me whatever. He has told some persons that he had bought the timber, and others that he had borrowed it; however, between the buying and borrowing, it has been nearly two years since the timber was taken, and only about one year since I found it out.

Fifty Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the subscriber, on the 3d inst. Negro JEM, about 5 feet 5 inches high, 25 or 26 years of age, stout and well made, except that he is perhaps a little knockkneed; his complexion dark, has a large scar on the upper lip, occasioned, it is said, by his falling, when a child, on some edged tool; has a down look when spoken to, and is apt to be short and insolent in answering. The clothes he took with him are not recollected, except a red flannel shirt, a pair of Russia duck sailor's trowsers, and a coarse wool hat with broad brim, nearly half worn. Having gone off without any provocation, it is probable his intention is to steer his course towards Baltimore or Pennsylvania, and pass for a free man. He has hauled the seine the two last seasons in Pomonkey, where he may have gone, or perhaps to Alexandria, where he is also a little acquainted. If taken 20 miles from home, or out of the county, I will give 20 dollars for securing him in any gaol, or if taken 50 miles from home, or out of the state, I will give the above reward of fifty dollars. Dr. Thomson's System of Chemistry.

IN FOUR VOLUMES OCTAVO.

THE preceding edition of Dr. Thomson's Chemistry, had acquired so much reputation both in England and upon the continent of Europe, that a new edition, comprising the new facts with which the science had been enriched, and the new views of the subject which extended knowledge had suggested as indispensable, was eagerly looked for by the scientific world. A new edition has accordingly appeared, wherein the former edition of five volumes has been condensed into four.

All the new discoveries, and all the new theories of Chemical Phænomena, have been considered and embraced in the present improved edition: so that it is indispensable to the chemical student, as presenting the only condensed view of the changes and alterations in chemical doctrine, which the discoveries of the last ten years have suggested. No apology therefore can be necessary for reprinting such a book in this country; for the press does not furnish a substitute for it. But, there is so much theoretical suggestion—so much abstruse calculation—so much fact of dubious authority—and so much dubious validity—that notes and illustrations are absolutely necessary, not merely to render the book more useful, but more intelligible.

Under these impressions, I thought fit to write notes in illustration (and sometimes in contradiction) of the work itself, rather than to make any abridgement of it. Those who wish to know the modern views of chemical science, must peruse it; and to very many who will be anxious to study it, elucidation will be necessary. I have endeavoured to supply these, to the best of my ability; regardless whether my own opinions are in dissonance or coincidence with those of my author; leaving to the reader to decide between us.

The work will be published, with notes and illustrations, in four volumes 8vo.

James Kennedy & Son,

RESPECTFULLY inform the public that they have just received from LEE's MEDICINE STORE, No. 46, Maiden lane, New-York, a fresh supply of the following valuable MEDICINES:

Hamilton's Worm-destroying Lozenges,

Which have within sixteen years past cured an immense number of persons of both sexes of every age and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from WORMS, and from obstructions or foulness in the stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of as operating with violence; on the contrary a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent & is so mild in its operation that it cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old should no worms exist in the body; but will without pain or griping cleanse the stomach and bowels of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion.

Description of Worms, and the symptoms by which they are known.

Worms which infest the human body are chiefly of four kinds viz.—The Teres or large round worm; the Ascarides or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitine or short flat white worm; and lastly, the Tænia or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food and sometimes voracious; purging with slimy and fœtid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; pains in the head and thighs and lowness of spirits; slow fever with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent "the vomiting and purging of children"—a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

The Restorative Powder for the Teeth and Gums.

For the prevention and cure of BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS is recommended

HAHN's ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of person can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.
